RUNS IN SNOW BARE FOOT; IS BADLY FROZEN

August Bettenhausen has been in a serious condition at the home of his brother John, west of Tin-ley Park, since Friday morning, when he was badly frost-bitten while in a dazed condition. He told his brother John in the morning that he was not feeling good, and the latter told him to stay in bed. Both Mr. and Mrs. John Bettenhausen went out in the barn to milk the cows, leaving August alone, and when they returned to the house, he had disappeared.

Clarence Bettenhausen, living a half mile up the road, found August hidden behind a straw stack. He had wandered across the farm yard after running across the field from John's place. His feet were badly frost-bitten, as well as other parts of his body.
Dr. Van Wormer has been in charge of the case.

Beer Runner Fined $750; Cash has no Cash Goes to Jail

Cash in name only but without any in his pocket proved tough luck for Walter Cash of Gary, Indiana, who was nabbed at Mokena a week ago with a truck load of 3.82 per cent beer, when he pleaded guilty in the county court Wednesday morning to a charge of hauling intoxicating liquor, was fined $750 and costs. Cash being unable to pay his fine he was committed to the county jail.

Morris Christensen also of Gary who was arrested with Cash was arraigned in court at the same time and plead not guilty. He is being held in jail pending his arrangements to secure bonds.

Deputies John Frisch and Walter Fisher arrested the men last Wednesday afternoon as they were coming thru Mokena with a truck. After the truck was seized its cargo was found consisted of 864 bottles of beer.

The state has asked that the truck in which the beer was found be sold at a sheriff's sale.

Frankfort Caucus Fails to fill Ticket

The Republican caucus held at Frankfort Saturday afternoon was a very tame affair, not enough candidates being nominated to fill the slim ticket. Fred C. Hinspeter was chosen for school trustee, and Emil Weber for justice of the peace. No candidate was named for the office of constable, which office goes begging each year. The town election will be held Tuesday, April 3rd. A very light vote is anticipated.

New Lenox Town Officers Chosen

The annual caucus was held in New Lenox Saturday afternoon.
A large crowd of voters turned out.
There is only one ticket in the field. The following candidates were nominated by acclamation:
For Supervisor, G. J. D. Star-mann; for Constable, Henry Craven; for School Trustee, Joseph Jarchow. The annual election will be held on Tuesday, April 3rd, at the Grange hall.

New Lenox Farm Sold $275 an Acre

A high water mark in the price of farm land was set the past week when Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Pes-ter of Wright county, Iowa sold 240 acres of farm land west of New Lenox to Mr. and Mrs. Geo.
H. Pester of Wilton township, for $68,000 a price of $275 per acre.
According to Mrs. Geo. Pester, her husband sold 125 acres of farm land located in Iowa to his brother, Frank Pester, for $240 an acre. The two deals were made the same time.

TINLEY PARK MAYORALTY FIGHT IS GETTING HOT

Tinley Park is going to have a real hot election, from present indications. The chief fight is hinging on the office of mayor.
Henry Wyman and F. A. Harper have thrown their hats in the ring. Both have filed their petitions with the village clerk as candidates for this office. It is hinted at that a third candidate is thinking of filing his petition.
J. C. Andres, the present mayor, who has filled this office for quite a number of years, has withdrawn from the race.

Three village trustees are also to be elected. Thus far four petitions have been filed in the office of Chas. Nielsen, village clerk, by candidates for these offices. Those who have filed are:
Henry Klepper, Rudolph Hug,
John F. Boyer and Bert Fulton.
The outgoing trustees are: Fred Hick, Bert Fulton and John Klepper, Jr.

All candidates are getting busy, and a very lively campaign is looked for. The village election will be held the third Tuesday in April.

Bremen Town Election Tame

The annual town election in the town of Bremen is going to be a very tame affair, from present indications. Only two offices are to be filled, namely: those of school trustee and justice of the peace. Louis Lippincott has filed his petition as a candidate for the office of justice of the peace with Chas. Nielsen, town clerk. He is the only candidate who has filed a petition for a town office. No petitions had been filed up to Monday for the office of school trustee. The town election will be held on Tuesday, April 3rd.

Coming Events

Easter dance at the Saenger hall, Tinley Park, Easter Monday, April 2nd.

Annual town elections to be held in the towns of Bremen, Orland, Frankfort, New Lenox, Worth, Palos on Tuesday, April 3rd, for electing town officers.
As this is the off year, only a few minor officers are to be elected in most of the towns. In New Lenox a supervisor is to be elected, besides a few minor officers.

Arbor and Bird Day, by proclamation of Gov. Len Small set for April 18th.

Dedication of new $60,000 St.
John Evangelical church at Mokena on Sunday, April 15th.
Three services, morning, afternoon and evening, will be held.
Hundreds of visitors from neighboring congregations are expected.

Village elections in Mokena,
Frankfort, Tinley Park, Orland, Worth, Tuesday, April 17th.
Mothers' Day, May 13th.

Son of Mokena Garage Man, Burnt

The little son of Mr. and Mrs.
Fred Hentsch met with a very painful accident, Sunday evening, at the home of his grandparents,
Mr. and Mrs. John Wannemacher, when he fell against a hot stove, burning the palms and fingers of both hands. He is getting along nicely.

ANOTHER NEW BUNGALOW

August Hentsch sold a lot in the northwest side of the village of Mokena to his son Albert, who is planning to build a bungalow this spring.

Why The News-Bulletin Should be your Home Paper

The merchant tells of the good quality of his wares in his advertisements, so it is not amiss for the News-Bulletin to call attention to its good qualities, and show why it should be your community paper. First of all, this paper gives you news of the community which you would not receive in any other way, as many of its items are exclusive, no other paper printing them until after they have appeared in the News-Bulletin first.

In addition to playing up all the important local news, this paper prints the advts. of the LIVE business men of the several communities, and also of the big department stores of Joliet, offering many worth while and exceptional bargains. By reading these every week and taking advantage of the bargains offered, you are sure to save money on many things which you would pay a lot more for if bought in the regular way.

This paper gives you all the church news, and also keeps you posted on various coming events.
Now this is only a part of the many good things it does.

Turn to the inside pages. Here you will find an interesting serial story. The News-Bulletin runs about four or five complete novels in serial form throughout the year. These books alone would cost a whole lot more than the subscription price of the News-Bulletin for one year, namely, $1.25. The articles appearing under the head of "National Capsule Notes" give you information on some of the important matters in Congress which interest the whole nation.

Then turn to the department under the head of "News of the week cut down for busy readers."
Here you will find interesting news items from all over the country. News stories from abroad as well as from our own land also are given. The latest news of the week is featured in pictures, which makes the news matter appear as real as tho the reader were on the scene.

For those interested in Sunday school, we have a specially prepared column on "The Sunday School Lesson."

Surely this fine array of reading matter is well worth the low subscription price of $1.25 per year.
Our idea is to make the subscription price low and build up a big circulation. The fact that the subscription price is low does not mean that the quality of the paper offered is cheap, but on the contrary, it is of the best offered in the weekly field. The fact that the city paper is only 2 cents does not make the quality of the paper cheap.

We are glad to say we have been adding new readers to our list every week without any solicitation or any special contests or circulation schemes. The past week a large number of renewals have come into the News-Bulletin office, showing that our readers find this paper of interest and worthy of their continued support.

Supposing this paper were taken out of this community. You would miss it. Few people are aware what an asset a live weekly paper like the News-Bulletin is to a community. When any church affair, civic matter or community interest is to be brought before the people, it is the paper which is needed to spread the message.

Every home in the whole community should be on the subscription list of this paper. If not a subscriber, do not borrow your neighbor's paper, but subscribe for it yourself. Anyone in this whole territory can afford $1.25 per year for this paper.

A community is judged by the way it supports its home enterprises. The large mail order houses watch all the country papers, and when they find a town whose merchants and business men do not advertise in their home paper, these mail order houses get busy and flood the farmers with catalogues and get the trade, which they deserve because they believe in advertising. The country merchant who advertises continually is the fellow who gets the business, and does not have to fear mail order house competition. The only way to beat the mail order houses is to offer equally as good bargains as they do and ADVERTISE THEM as they do.

Mokena Teacher Accepts city offer

Mrs. Greene, one of the instructors of the Mokena public school received an offer last week from a Chicago school at a salary of $250 a month. As the local school board could compete with this offer she resigned Friday and accepted the Chicago offer. The school board was sorry to see Mrs. Greene go because she was an excellent instructor.

Miss Buckley of Birmingham, Alabama has been engaged to fill the vacancy. She had taught at Sterling, Ill., before coming here.

Mokena Man Buys Million Marks

Alderman August Hentsch of Mokena has taken a little "flier" in the foreign money market and were he to go to Germany now he would be a millionaire. He recently purchased a million marks for $92.50 thru a Joliet bank. The marks are coming from New York and Alderman Hentsch declares he will have to hire a truck to haul the marks to the bank when they arrive.

MISS LULU BETT

—15—

In crossing the lobby in the hotel at Savannah, Georgia, Lulu's most pressing problem had been to know where to look. But now the idlers in the Hess house lobby did not exist. In time she found the door of the intensely rose-colored reception room. There, in a fat, rose-colored chair, beside a cataract of lace curtain, sat Di, alone.

Lulu entered. She had no idea what to say. When Di looked up, started up, frowned, Lulu felt as if she herself were the culprit. She said the first thing that occurred to her:

"I don't believe mamma'll like your taking her nice satchel."

"Well," said Di, exactly as if she had been at home. And superadded: "My goodness!" And then cried rudely: "What are you here for?"

"For you," said Lulu. "You—you—ought not to be here, Di."

"What's that to you?" Di cried.

"Why, Di, you're just a little girl—"

Lulu said that this was all wrong, and stopped miserably. How was she to go on? "Di," she said, "if you and Bobby want to get married, why not let us get you up a nice wedding at home?" And she said that this sounded as if she were talking about a tea-party.

"Who said we wanted to be married?"

"Well, he's here."

"Who said he's here?"

"Isn't he?"

Di sprang up. "Aunt Lulu," she said, "you're a funny person to be telling me what to do."

Lulu said, flushing: "I love you just the same as if I was married happy, in a home."

"Well, you aren't!" cried Di cruelly, "and I'm going to do just as I think best."

Lulu thought this over, her look grave and sad. She tried to find something to say. "What do people say to people," she wondered, "when it's like this?"

"Getting married is for your whole life," was all that came to her.

"Yours wasn't," Di flashed at her.

Lulu's color deepened, but there seemed to be no resentment in her. She must deal with this right—that was what her manner seemed to say. And how should she deal?

"Di," she cried, "come back with me—and wait till mamma and papa get home."

"That's likely. They say I'm not to be married till I'm twenty-one."

"Well, but how young that is!"

"It is to you."

"Di! This is wrong—it is wrong."

"There's nothing wrong about getting married—if you stay married."

"Well, then it can't be wrong to let them know."

"It isn't. But they'd treat me wrong. They'd make me stay at home. And I won't stay at home—I won't stay there. They act as if I was ten years old."

Abruptly in Lulu's face there came a light of understanding.

"Why, Di," she said, "do you feel that way, too?"

Di missed this. She went on:

"I'm grown up. I feel just as grown up as they do. And I'm not allowed to do a thing I feel. I want to be away—I will be away!"

"I know about that part," Lulu said.

She now looked at Di with attention. Was it possible that Di was suffering in the air of that home as she herself suffered? She had not thought of that. There Di had seemed so young, so dependent, so—squirm. Here, by herself, waiting for Bobby, in the Hess house at Milton, she was curiously adult. Would she be adult if she were let alone?

"You don't know what it's like," Di cried, "to be hushed up an laughed at and paid no attention to everything you say."

"Don't!" said Lulu. "Don't!"

She was breathing quickly and looking at Di. If this was why Di was leaving home, . . .

"But, Di," she cried, "do you love Bobby Larkin?"

By this Di was embarrassed. "I've got to marry somebody," she said, "and it might as well be him."

"But is it him?"

"Yes, it is," said Di. "But," she added, "I know I could love almost anybody real nice that was nice to me." And this she said, not in her own right, but either she had picked it up somewhere and adopted it, or else the terrible modernity and honesty of her day somehow spoke through her, for its own. But to Lulu it was as if something familiar turned its face as he recognized.

"Di!" she cried.

"It's true. You ought to know that." She waited for a moment. "You did it," she added. "Mamma said so."

At this onslaught Lulu was stupefied. For she began to perceive its truth.

"I know what I want to do, I guess," Di muttered, as if to try to cover what she had said.

Up to that moment, Lulu had been feeling intensely that she understood Di, but that Di did not know this. Now Lulu felt that she and Di actually shared some unsuspected sisterhood. It was not only that they were both badgered by Dwight. It was more than that. They were two women. And she must make Di know that she understood her.

"Di," Lulu said, breathing hard, "what you just said is true, I guess. Don't you think I don't know. And now I'm going to tell you—"

She might have poured it all out, claimed her kinship with Di by virtue of that which had happened in Savannah, Georgia. But Di said:

"Here come some ladies. And goodness, look at the way you look!"

Lulu glanced down. "I know," she said, "but I guess you'll have to put up with me."

The two women entered, looked about with the complaisance of those who examine a hotel property, find criticism incumbent, and have no errand. These two women had out-dressed their occasion. In their presence Di kept silence, turned away her head, gave them to know that she had nothing to do with this blue cotton person beside her. When they had gone on, "What do you mean by my having to put up with you?" Di asked sharply.

"I mean I'm going to stay with you."

Di laughed scornfully—she was again the rebellious child. "I guess Bobby'll have something to say about that," she said insolently.

"They left you in my charge."

"But I'm not a baby—the idea, Aunt Lulu!"

"I'm going to stay right with you," said Lulu. She wondered what she should do if Di suddenly marched away from her, through that bright lobby and into the street. She thought miserably that she must follow. And then her whole concern for the ethics of Di's course was lost in her agonized memory of her terrible, broken shoes.

Di did not march away. She turned her back squarely upon Lulu, and looked out of the window. For her life Lulu could think of nothing more to say. She was now feeling miserably on the defensive.

They were sitting in silence when Bobby Larkin came into the room.

Di flew to meet him. She assumed all the pretty agitations of her role, ignored Lulu.

"Bobby! Is it all right?"

Bobby looked over her head.

"Miss Lulu," he said fatuously. "If it ain't Miss Lulu."

He looked from her to Di, and did not take in Di's resigned shrug.

"Bobby," said Di, "she's come to stop us getting married, but she can't. I've told her so."

"She don't have to stop us," quoth Bobby gloomily, "we're stopped."

"What do you mean?" Di laid one hand flatly on her cheek, instinctively in her melodrama.

Bobby drew down his brows, set his hand on his leg, elbows out.

"We're minors," said he.

"Well, gracious, you didn't have to tell them that."

"No. They knew I was."

"But, silly! Why didn't you tell them you're not?"

"But I am."

Di stared. "For pity sakes," she said, "don't you know how to do anything?"

"What would you have me do?" he inquired indignantly, with his head held very stiff, and with a boyish, admirable lift of chin.

"Why tell them we're both twenty-one. We look it. We know we're responsible—that's all they care for. Well, you are a funny . . ."

"You wanted me to lie?" he said.

"Oh, don't make out you never told a fib."

"Well, but this—!" he stared at her.

"I never heard of such a thing," Di cried accusingly.

"Anyhow," he said, "there's nothing to do now. The cat's out. I've told our ages. We've got to have our folks in on it."

"Is that all you can think of?" she demanded.

"What else?"

"Why, come on to Bainbridge or Holt, and tell them we're of age, and be married there."

"Di," said Bobby, "why, that'd be a rotten go."

Di said, oh, very well, if he didn't want to marry her. He replied stonily that of course he wanted to marry her. Di stuck out her little hand.

She turned her back squarely upon Lulu and looked out of the window. For her

"Di," said Bobby, "why, that'd be a rotten go."

Di said, oh, very well, if he didn't want to marry her. He replied stonily that of course he wanted to marry her. Di stuck out her little hand.

She turned her back squarely upon Lulu and looked out of the window. For her life Lulu could think of nothing more to say. She was now feeling miserably on the defensive.

They were sitting in silence when Bobby Larkin came into the room.

Di flew to meet him. She assumed all the pretty agitations of her role, ignored Lulu.

"Bobby! Is it all right?"

Bobby looked over her head.

"Miss Lulu," he said fatuously. "If it ain't Miss Lulu."

He looked from her to Di, and did not take in Di's resigned shrug.

"Bobby," said Di, "she's come to stop us getting married, but she can't. I've told her so."

"She don't have to stop us," quoth Bobby gloomily, "we're stopped."

"What do you mean?" Di laid one hand flatly on her cheek, instinctively in her melodrama.

Bobby drew down his brows, set his hand on his leg, elbows out.

"We're minors," said he.

"Well, gracious, you didn't have to tell them that."

"No. They knew I was."

"But, silly! Why didn't you tell them you're not?"

"But I am."

Di stared. "For pity sakes," she said, "don't you know how to do anything?"

"What would you have me do?" he inquired indignantly, with his head held very stiff, and with a boyish, admirable lift of chin.

"Why tell them we're both twenty-one. We look it. We know we're responsible—that's all they care for. Well, you are a funny . . ."

"You wanted me to lie?" he said.

"Oh, don't make out you never told a fib."

"Well, but this—!" he stared at her.

"I never heard of such a thing," Di cried accusingly.

"Anyhow," he said, "there's nothing to do now. The cat's out. I've told our ages. We've got to have our folks in on it."

"Is that all you can think of?" she demanded.

"What else?"

"Why, come on to Bainbridge or Holt, and tell them we're of age, and be married there."

"Di," said Bobby, "why, that'd be a rotten go."

Di said, oh, very well, if he didn't want to marry her. He replied stonily that of course he wanted to marry her. Di stuck out her little hand.

She turned her back squarely upon Lulu and looked out of the window. For her

The Cave Spring School.

Few springs were better known, or more used on this border of civilization, than was the "Cave Spring," that served the pioneers and their children to the second generation. It is scarcely necessary to mention its site on the present Graham boulevard near the crossing of Charlotte street. Here, according to family history recalled by Mrs. Nellie M. Harris, a school was taught by Mr. Piper. This school was in existence about 1840 and the pupils now remembered by Mrs. Harris as attending were her uncles, Washington H. and Joseph Smith Chick, and William Mulkey. Canada Offers "Last Chance" for Virgin Farms

THINK of what you could produce on a farm of virgin fertility, without the burden of high-acreage cost. Think of what 20-to-40 bushel wheat would mean to you under these conditions, and of dairying and stock raising on cheap pasture land. Land pays for itself in a few crops—no artificial fertilizer—no heavy investment. You have envied the farmer who got his start when land was cheap. Here's your chance, perhaps your last chance, for the same brand of prosperity.

Western Canada—Your Opportunity! Special Renter's Plan—Buy Out of Profits

Western Canada is the farmer's land of opportunity. Thousands of settlers who started not many years ago with little or nothing, are today the owners of fine farms, with comfortable homes and barns, thrifty stock, dairy herds—all the marks of prosperity. Yet land is not dear—only $15 to $20 an acre for rich, virgin, prairie convenient to railways. Land is not dear in Western Canada—yet because there is so much of it. But many settlers are expected in 1923, and now is your opportunity, before the best farms are taken. Get started. Taxes are reduced, not raised, on land brought under cultivation. On farm buildings, improvements, machinery, personal effects, automobile, etc., there is no tax at all. Canada wants workers—it wants its land farmed—and the farmers, through their municipal councils, have practical control of all local taxation.

Public Works Program for Unemployed

WASHINGTON.—Members of congress who have studied business depression in the United States and attendant unemployment problems, and believe the federal government should take the initiative in the formation of a public works program to meet unemployment emergencies, are preparing to get behind legislation in the next congress to meet this situation.

The President's conference on unemployment more than a year ago recommended that federal, state, and municipal governments seek to expand public works during periods of industrial depression. This was followed by temporary action in some cases which afforded some measure of relief. No permanent action was taken, however. Now a bill has been introduced as the result of agitation by an organization of public spirited citizens, headed by George Foster Peabody of New York, with a view to the formation of a comprehensive program of public works to guard against future cyclical periods of business depression and unemployment.

The organization formed to agitate this legislation is known as the National Unemployment league, and its proposed legislation was introduced before adjournment by Senator Frelinghuysen (Rep., N. J.) and Representative Zihlman (Rep., Md.), being a bill for creation of a commission to lay the foundation for a policy of expansion of public works in time of depression.

Pending this legislation, which cannot be enacted until the next congress, Representative Martin B. Madden (Rep., Ill.), chairman of the appropriations committee, is already engaged in working out a scheme for an extensive program of public works already authorized, with a view to helping the employment situation.

The bill calls for an "investigation of the needs of the nation for public works to be carried on by federal, state, and municipal agencies in periods of business depression and unemployment."

March 4 Closed Up "The Boar's Nest"?

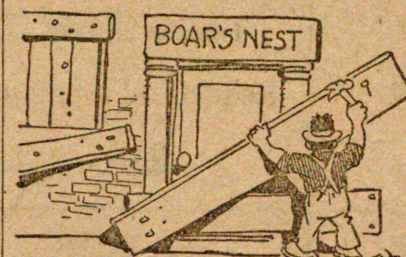

MARCH 4 and the death of the Sixty-seventh congress closed up—maybe—"The Boar's Nest." This closely guarded rendezvous of an exclusive inner circle of congress members on that date followed its numerous, but never before so pretentious, predecessors.

In other words, what has come to be known among those on the inside as the stiffest poker game ever organized by the national legislators which is played in specially maintained quarters only a stone's throw from the Department of Justice, was broken up.

These moneyed gentlemen had their pastimes completely organized. They operated on the club plan, contributing enough from month to month to maintain in grandeur the apartment they had christened "The Boar's Nest." They employed a man as caretaker, steward, and bookkeeper, who made it his home.

The largest item of unpaid losses is said to be $14,000, charged against a former New York statesman, who had a noteworthy career in the house and in a still higher branch of the public service.

Getting down to the matter of just how stiff their game was, it called for $1,000 for a stack of chips—and no checks went, even though signed by a senator, representative or other responsible official.

Perhaps the outstanding record of the present session was a "killing" made one night recently by a member of a famous feudist family of West Virginia who is said to come to Washington at regular intervals for the sole purpose of sitting in at the "nest." In that game his hand won him a pot of $32,000.

A close second to this was the achievement of a Pacific coast senator a few weeks ago. He had been a consistent loser for some time. He more than retrieved by taking a pot of $24,000.

Considerable excitement was caused by an entirely unexpected police raid on the "nest" a few days before congress adjourned.

Uncle Sam Says, "Go Ahead and Sue"

ELI N. SONNENSTRAHL of Brooklyn, N. Y., can now sue the United States for what he says it owes him for beans, for all the senate cares. Before adjournment the senate passed a bill providing: That the claim of Eli N. Sonnenstrahl, of Brooklyn, N. Y., for such further sum as he may be entitled to recover, as added to the amount he has already received, for certain beans, commandeered by the Navy department, at San Francisco, Calif., on or about February, 1918, may be sued for and submitted to the United States District court in and for the Eastern district of New York, and said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine such suit and to enter a judgment or decree for such amount and costs, if any, as shall be found to be due against the United States in favor of said Sonnenstrahl upon the same principles and measures of liability as in like cases under section 10 of the Lever act, and with the same rights of appeal: Provided, That suit shall be brought and commenced within four months from the date of the passage of this act.

Senator Calder of New York made this explanation:

Mr. Calder, Mr. President, the beans that are referred to in this bill were owned by one Eli N. Sonnenstrahl. He offered to sell them to the government at cost. The government refused to take them; but in 1918, without notice, the government commandeered these beans, and paid him some $22,000 for them. He claims that they were worth $26,000. At any rate, the government refused to pay him more than they tendered him. Subsequently, however, in negotiations with the Navy department, they offered to give him an additional sum of $472.86. He believed he was entitled to something like $2,851. He asks the right to sue for that amount.

Ask Release of "Political Prisoners"

FIFTY bishops of the Protestant Episcopal church have joined Bishop Charles H. Brent, formerly chief of the chaplain service, A. E. F., in asking the President for the release of all "political prisoners" now serving sentences. Bishop Brent's reasons for advocating amnesty which the other bishops endorse are:

"The nations with whom we were associated in the war all promptly granted an amnesty to their 'political prisoners.'"

"I am assured by competent lawyers who have examined the evidence in the case that these men are in prison solely for expression of opinion in writing or speech."

"This is a fitting moment in which to grant them an unconditional amnesty as an act of delayed justice."

"My observation leads me to believe that such a course would meet with the unqualified support of the vast majority of our citizens."

Bishop Charles P. Anderson of Chicago, who has advocated amnesty for some time, urges that there be no further delays in granting it.

Among the other bishops who have petitioned the President are: Rt. Rev. Hugh L. Burleson, D. D., bishop of South Dakota; Rt. Rev. Frank Du Moulin, D. D., bishop coadjutor of Ohio; Rt. Rev. Sheldon N. Griswold, D. D., suffragan bishop of Chicago; Rt. Rev. Frank A. McElwain, D. D., bishop of Minnesota; Rt. Rev. T. N. Morrison, D. D., bishop of Iowa, and Rt. Rev. Charles D. Williams, D. D., bishop of Michigan (since deceased).

Notice is hereby given that sealed bids for the furnishing, unloading, hauling, dumping and spreading of approximately 290 cu. yds. of 3-inch crushed stone, approximately 125 cu. yds. of 1½-inch crushed stone, and approximately 90 cu. yds. of screenings, on what is known as 159th street, will be received by the Highway Commissioner of Bremen Township, at the office of the Town Clerk, in the Village Hall at Tinley Park, Ill., until 2 p. m.

SATURDAY, APRIL 7th, 1923.
Also sealed bids will be received at the time and place mentioned above for labor and teaming by the hour for grading, ditching and making embankments on 159th street, under the direction of the Highway Commissioner.

Only sealed bids will be considered.
The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

LOCATION

The location of the road upon which the improvement is to be made is as follows:

159th street, on section line between Sections 14 and 23, Bremen Township, extending from Crawford avenue approximately ¼ mile in an easterly direction.

Average haul from Oak Forest, Ill., is approximately 1½ miles. Deliveries can also be made from other nearby gravel pits or stone quarries.

Engineer's estimate, $2,000.00.
Bids exceeding $9,000, if accepted, will have to be paid by anticipation warrants on the hard road fund of Bremen Township.

This job is being re-let on account of the last bids being in excess of the amount in the township's hard road fund. The width of the road to be improved is reduced from 12 feet to 10 feet.

Miss Cora Bormet sprang a surprise last Sunday on her brother Otto's birthday, when a party of young folks came to help celebrate. The evening was spent in music and games. Bunco was played at four tables. Prizes were awarded to Ethel Mager, high score, and Alma Bormet, booby. The men's high score went to Edgar Werner; booby went to Clarence Mager.

Waldon Larson and Otto Bormet also received prizes for carrying peanuts. At midnight a dainty luncheon was served to the following: The Misses Ethel Mager, Anna Oetter, Ella Yunker, Lydia Bettenhausen, Ingaberg Larson and Alice Schilling, and Messrs. Arthur Bettenhausen, Clarence Mager, Waldon and Berthe Larsen, Edgar Werner and John Yunker. All departed at a very early hour in the morning.

Mr and Mrs Willard Owen entertained a group of friends at an Irish party at their home Friday evening. Contests and music were the diversions, and in celebration of the wedding anniversary of Mr and Mrs Bartlett, a mock wedding was held. Margaret Owen gave piano numbers, George Robert Ford read, and Mr Mattei gave several saxophone solos.

Pictures on the life of Christ were shown at the M E church on Sunday evening. Next Sunday pictures of the Passion Play will be shown, in connection with a service conducted by Rev Fry, in German, beginning at 7 o'clock.

Services will be held every evening except Saturday of Passion week, and Friday evening a pageant, "The Challenge of the Cross," will be presented by the young women of the church. Special Easter music is being prepared by the choir. Rehearsal will be held in the church Saturday evening. Rev T K Gale of Joliet will have charge of the service Easter morning.

Nick Gauthier suffered a broken ankle, as the result of a fall, Thursday.

Mrs LeMue was hostess at a pinocle party at her home, Friday evening. The game was played at three tables, and prizes went to Mrs Henry Stillwagon and Charles Pfaff. Refreshments were served after the game.

Voters Called to Fight for Greater Economy in Government

The great part played by Congress—and still to be played—in introducing business into Government, is emphasized by John T. Pratt, Chairman of the National Budget Committee in commenting upon the recent speech of Brigadier General Charles G. Dawes, former Director of the Bureau of the Budget, at a dinner given in his honor by supporters of the Budget.

"In his enthusiasm for the indisputably effective pressure exerted by President Harding in administering the Budget Act," Mr. Pratt says, "General Dawes appeared to minimize the importance of the Act itself and ignored entirely the contributions which Congress has made during the last year toward the perfection of the budgetary system as a whole. In the view of those who have been advocating budgetary reform it was a most fortunate thing that President Harding assumed the attitude he did, but it would be equally unfortunate if the people of the country should be permitted to lose sight of the fact that without the co-operation of Congress the activities of the President in the interest of efficiency and economy would have been, and in the future will be, confined within comparatively narrow limits.

"Doubtless the application of Executive pressure in the Governmental business organization may well be styled revolutionary, since no previous President has so asserted his authority and, indeed, under the former system was not expected to. The revolution began, however, when the people of this country realized that their public business was not being conducted as their private enterprises were. It took form when Congress, by a practically unanimous vote, recognized the public sentiment in favor of more business-like methods in the conduct of the Government and prescribed the forms under which those methods were to be instituted. It was brought about when President Harding signed the Budget Act, called Charles G. Dawes as the first Director of the Bureau of the Budget, and then

JOHN T. PRATT
Chairman of National Budget Committee

backed him to the limit in every measure which that resourceful soldier and business man took to establish business principles in the administration of the executive departments. It succeeded when Congress acknowledged itself bound by the plain implications of its own Act and subjected itself to a procedure which was in conformity with the new duties and responsibilities which it had imposed upon the President.

"There are reasons for believing that Congressional devotion to the budget idea will be tested in the next Congress. The President has authorized Brigadier General Herbert M. Lord, the present Budget Bureau Director, to direct the various department heads to revise their estimated expenditures for 1924 to accord with the estimated revenues, the object being to avoid the prospective deficit. Under the Budget Act no officer or employee of any department or establishment may submit to Congress any estimate or request for an appropriation, unless at the request of either House of Congress.

"Unless at the request of either House of Congress, there, it seems to me, lies the danger to the integrity of the budget system. Congress, having the final word with respect to appropriations, may conceivably render the President's budget recommendations nugatory simply by calling in department heads and bureau chiefs and taking their word rather than that of the President and his Bureau of the Budget as to the appropriations necessary. In these circumstances a contest appears to be inevitable. With whom will the decision lie? It seems to me not with the President, not with his department heads, not even with Congress, but wholly with the people of the country. In so far as they pledge their candidates to an effective control over expenditures through the budgetary system, in so far as they insist with their votes upon a policy of economy, so far will they help to hold the achievements of the last year toward a more business-like administration of their National affairs.

BILL WOULD

PROTECT BIRDS

The farmers, as well as all right public spirited citizens, are interested in the bill up in the Illinois State Legislature now, which if enacted into a law, will protect quail, song birds and other members of the feathered tribe from being ruthlessly slaughtered, not only by ignorant foreigners, but also by some would-be wise local nimrods. This is one of the best measures which have come up for some time, and surely ought to be endorsed by every right-minded citizen. Petitions are being prepared in Mokena, and will be circulated among the farmers and citizens of this section for signatures, these petitions being for the purpose of urging the members of the Legislature from this district to vote in favor of the measure to make it a law.

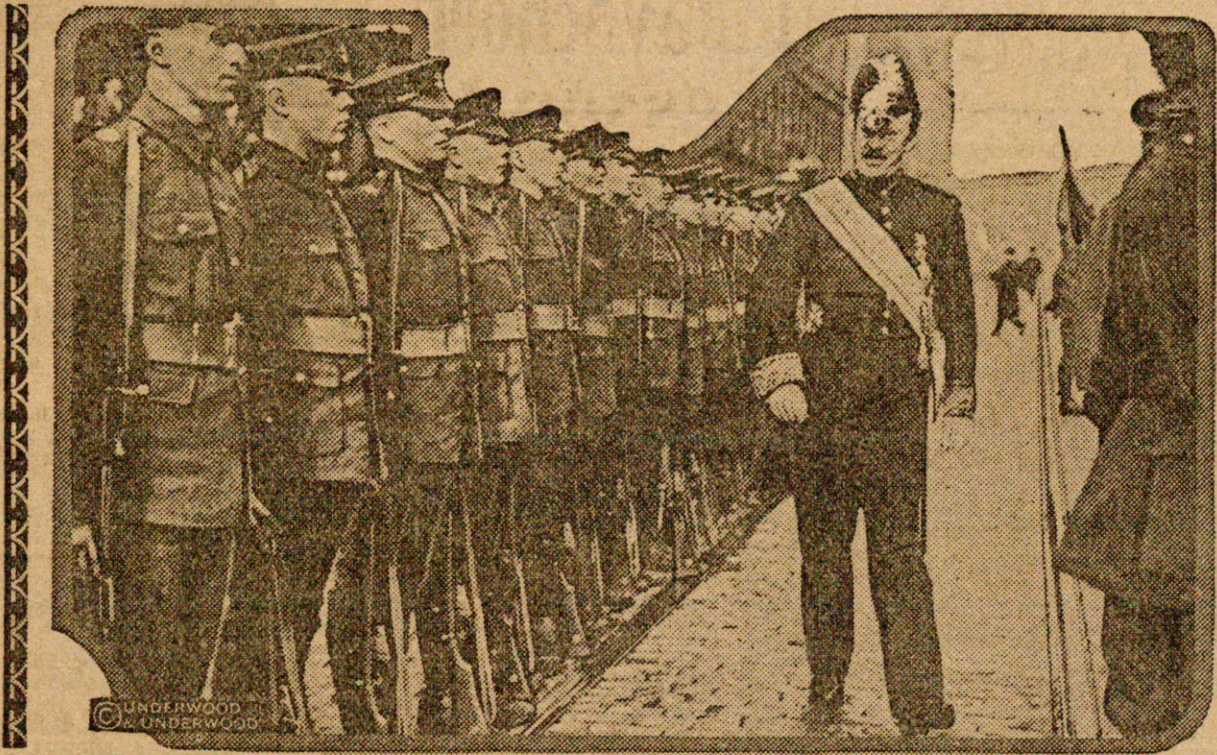

Hickory Creek

Being Polluted says Mokena Fisherman

Some time ago Police Magistrate John F. Schultz of Mokena and Mayor George J. Hacker were instrumental in placing an order with the State Game and Fish Commission for fish from the State hatcheries for stocking Hickory creek.

Wm. G. Schmuhl, who is a good fisherman, states that before these fish can thrive and are fit for food, the creek must be purged of the sewerage which is being dumped into it. He has shown that one of the worst habits of dumping sewerage in the creek is that of the Bowman dairy plant, whose milk waste and ammonia water from the ice plant all run into the water of the creek. Ammonia kills off the fish, Mr. Schmuhl declares. He has caught fish which were not fit for food, being covered with a green foam and white specks. This is a matter which should be given public attention. If the waste mentioned pollutes the waters of the creek, it should be stopped. Other means, no doubt, could be devised for disposing of this waste.

The proverbial generosity of persons in the theatrical world was proved concretely the other night by an incident that took place near the stage entrance of a downtown theater. A crippled man stood hat in hand, offering nothing for sale and more than 90 per cent of the persons in the show stopped and gave him some sort of contribution. Not one woman in the show was seen to pass the cripple without giving him something.

One young woman said, as she gave the unfortunate man a bill: "I'm sorry I haven't more. At times, I, too, have felt that the world was all wrong and that there wasn't any use to try, but persons always helped me, and who knows, you may be giving me some sort of assistance some day when I need it even worse than you do now."—Exchange

Easter Splendid Festival in the Early Centuries

Easter Sunday! What a picture the words suggest! A beautiful, sunny day, church-going and the display of the new spring suit on the boulevard in the afternoon. A day much like any other Sunday, for in these prosaic times Easter is not the brilliant, joyous festival it once was.

Suppose we were to turn back the pages of history to the Middle Ages. What a festival Easter was in those days! The old pagan Anglo-Saxon festival of Easter was not merely a remembrance and its strange mummery not forgotten. Everything was light-hearted and colorful and vibrant. Even those who had to wear the long faces during the rest of the year forgot their seriousness to play and dance and perform strange tricks upon one another in the streets.

The priests, along with the laymen, imbibed the spirit of Easter and laughed and played with the care-free spirit of schoolboys. Instead of preaching serious sermons or exhorting the people to consider the wickedness of their ways, they told humorous stories of how the devil tried to keep the Spirit of Christ from ascending out of hell into Heaven. Their stories were very droll and made the people laugh exceedingly. Imagine a minister these days getting up before his congregation and telling funny stories Easter morning!

The people were very happy and greeted one another cheerfully upon the streets. "Christ is risen," they would say. "Yea, Christ is truly risen," would come the answer. Then the mummery and the leaping and capering and trick playing upon the streets! The modern French festival of the Lenten season, with its joyous abandon, more accurately resembles the Easter festivals of the Middle Ages.

The Pascal Candle. The great sight of the day was the Pascal candle burned in the principal church or cathedral in the city. How the people rushed and thronged through the streets to see it! Oftentimes the candles were huge affairs, rising as high as 75 feet in the air and weighing as much as 75 pounds. What was left of the candle at Whitsunday was made into candles for the poor.

The interiors of the churches were truly marvelous. Thousands of candles burned in every niche, flooding the place with a marvelous brilliance. Dazzling colors were everywhere. "Christ is risen. Let us be joyous," was the thought that was in the minds of everyone. Then, after the impressive chanting of the Easter hymns, would come the giving of the Easter kiss. Even the beggar and the outcast was not forgotten in this.

Easter at the beginning was a pagan celebration for the coming of spring. When the Christians came they took over most of the old observances, changing the significance to correspond with the new religion. So the old Paschal lamb of the Hebrews became the lamb of Christ. The casting of an effigy of winter into a fire that represented spring was changed into a symbolism of Judas and the fires of hell.

The lighting of the Easter fires on the sacred mountains was said to correspond to the pillar of fire that led the Hebrews out of the wilderness into the Promised Land.

Played Ball in Streets. Many of the customs or observances, one time, had had religious meaning, but by the Middle Ages this symbolism had been partly forgotten. They merely represented the spirit and joviality of the day. So there was the custom of playing ball in the streets. The ball represented the sun, which was popularly supposed to give three hops when rising Easter morning. This sport was engaged in by everyone, even by the priests, bishops, monks and mayors and corporations of cities.

Another popular custom that grew out of the egg symbol for Easter was egg chipping and egg rolling. Both of these games were to test the thickness of the shells. We still have a survival of this custom in the egg-rolling contest held annually for children on the White House grounds.

The word Easter itself means April and is the name of the Anglo-Saxon Goddess of Spring. At first it was

HOPE SUPREME

I think of the garden after the rain;
And hope to my heart comes singing.
At morn the cherry blooms will be white,
And the Easter bells be ringing.
—Edna Dean Proctor.

celebrated with all the licentious mummery imaginable to a heathen religion, but as the centuries passed and the Christians came, it became a purely religious festival. The meaning of the rites were lost, but the people observed them just the same. Surely none of us feel that we are performing a heathen rite when we give Easter eggs to our friends.

In the early days of the Christian religion no festivals were observed, not even Easter. "The whole of time is a festival unto Christians because of the excellency of the good things which have been given," explained St. Chrysostom.

Gradually, however, Easter became the biggest festival in the calendar of the church. Everyone who professed the religion of Christ was supposed to take communion on that day. If he refused his name was to be excommunicated and at death his body to be denied Christian burial.

How Date Was Fixed.

The dispute over the true time to hold Easter was one of the quarrels that shook the early Christian world. Those who had been Jewish wanted to celebrate it on the 14th of the old Jewish month of Nisan—the beginning of the Jewish festival of the passover. Those who had been Gentiles said that Easter should be observed on the following Sunday.

For years this dispute waxed warmly, until it was finally settled by the great church council held at Nicea in 325.

It was decreed that Easter should come on a Sunday and that the date should be the first Sunday following the full moon after the vernal equinox (March 21). The city of Alexandria, then famed for its skill in astronomical affairs, was given the duty of fixing the date.

It was a pagan custom to regard the egg and the rabbit as symbols of procreancy. This is about the only Easter observance that has survived to modern times. Our custom of filling our homes with lilies and early flowers seems to be a custom of recent origin.

Dozens of Easter observances, no less picturesque, have been forgotten or overwhelmed in the seriousness of these latter days. So on Easter Monday husbands struck their wives, but on Tuesday the wives struck back. In Germany the men and maid servants observed the same custom, but used switches in doing so. It was, also, the custom for parents and children to try and surprise each other in bed early Easter morning. The tardy one would receive a rough switching to remind him or her of remissness.

Much Liberty Permitted.

In every year Easter day was a day of special privilege. In Russia everyone who wished was allowed to go into the churches and ring the bells as long as he desired. Thousands of people availed themselves of this opportunity. In England the men ran joyfully about the streets lifting the women from the ground three times. The one so favored had to give the male either a silver sixpence or a good hearty kiss. This custom was observed in some parts of the country almost down to the present day. In Puy in France, from time immemorial, the canons tried to catch one of their number sleeping Easter morning. After matins were sung in the chapel they rushed in a body to the room of the sleeping one and sprinkled him with water. If the canon was found asleep he was obliged to furnish his fellows with breakfast.

Easter Day Varied.

In ancient times Easter day fell on different dates in different climates, so cycles of years with dates fixed had to be drawn up. There was a dispute over the correctness of the cycles, and there was great confusion. Finally, however, Easter date was based on the Gregorian correction of the calendar, but that threw the Eastern church out of line. Consequently Easter has only once been celebrated universally by all Christians. This was in 1835, when all the reckonings fell on the same day.

One of the pious observances of the Middle Ages that marked the closing of Lent and the opening of Easter time was the blessing of the foods which had been denied so long. Many were the tales of the eager ones who were struck down for eating of them before they had been blessed.

The Easter season has always been accepted as the time for receiving the young into the church. What a picture it makes!

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Luke's Picture of Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Lessons From Luke's Gospel.

The method of review must be determined by the grade of the class, by the test of the teachers and by the nature of the studies of the quarter. Three methods are suggested:

(1) Centering in the Topic—Jesus the World's Savior. This method is suggested by Doctor Crannell.

1. The World's Liberator.
1. From Diseases. Lessons 1, 5.
2. From "Legalism." Lesson 1.
3. From Pride. Lessons 2, 6.
4. From Selfishness. Lessons 2, 5.
5. From Prejudice. Lesson 7.
6. From the Sinful Past. Lesson 7.
11. The World's Teacher.

1. About Sin and Salvation. Lesson 3.
2. About Human Duty:
 - (a) To Others. Lessons 2, 4.
 - (b) To God. Lessons 5, 8, 9.
 - (c) To State. Lesson 9.
 - (d) With Money. Lessons 4, 8, 9.
3. About Prayer. Lesson 6.
111. The World's Sacrifice.

1. Sacrifice Faced, Accepted. Lesson 10.

2. Sacrifice Rendered. Lesson 11.

(2) Modern Applications of the Lessons.

This scheme calls for reports by members of the class to whom assignments were previously made. This is taken from Peloubet's Notes.

Lesson I. "What should we keep of the old-time Sabbath?"

Lesson II. "Why is it hard to be humble today?"

Lesson III. "Are our churches really open to the prodigals?"

Lesson IV. "What should our rich men do for our Lazaruses?"

Lesson V. "Men and women who deserve much gratitude and receive little."

Lesson VI. "What may we reasonably expect from prayer?"

Lesson VII. "Why is it hard for a modern business man to be a Christian?"

Lesson VIII. "How the church should utilize its average members."

Lesson IX. "How can we get our church members to give as much as they should?"

Lesson X. "Things that Christians do not grieve enough over."

Lesson XI. "How the message of the cross might be brought to all men in a generation."

(3) The Central Teaching of the Lessons:

Lesson I. There is no malady of man connected with soul or body which Jesus cannot heal.

Lesson II. Unselfishness will move one to humbly take the lowest place in life, esteeming others better than himself.

Lesson III. God is longing and waiting to welcome to His bosom the vilest sinner who comes with contrition of heart.

Lesson IV. The one who lives only for this life shall surely suffer agony and torment in the life to come.

Lesson V. Ingratitude is common to the natural heart. The Lord expects those who experience His salvation to give Him their love.

Lesson VI. Those who pray to God in the right spirit shall surely get the blessings sought.

Lesson VII. The supreme purpose of the coming of Jesus Christ to the earth, taking upon Himself our humanity, and dying on the cross was to save lost men.

Lesson VIII. Upon those who have not been faithful in the use of gifts the Lord shall execute judgment at His coming.

Lesson IX. We are responsible to God, but God measures our gifts by the extent of our ability.

Lesson X. Bitter agony was suffered by Christ when He bore our sins.

Lesson XI. In Christ's death a full price was paid for our sins.

What God Remembers.

"I," says God, "will remember." How sweet to think of what God will, and what He will not, remember! He will remember his own covenant, but He will not remember His people's sins. The cross, which ratifies the former, puts away the latter.—O. H. McIntosh.

God's Offer.

Back of our ignorance and uncertainty God stands with His offer of wisdom and guidance to all who will ask it.

No Truer Picture.

There is no truer picture of what history reveals than a crucifix.—Rev. G. A. Studdert Kennedy.

The Lie.

Sin has many tools, but a lie is the handle that fits them all.—O. W. Holmes.

Mrs. Martha Strayer

ARE YOU A SUFFERING WOMAN?

Health is Most Important to You

Lincoln, Nebr.—"At one time I became very miserable with weakness from which women suffer. I suffered all the time. One of my neighbors urged me to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription because it had cured her of similar symptoms, so I decided to try it. The first bottle made me feel so much better, I took four more, and feel certain that in that one experience 'Favorite Prescription' saved me from the operating table and the surgeon's knife. Two years afterwards when the turn of life commenced, I took the 'Prescription' again with the result that I came through strong and healthy and am still maintaining wonderful health."—Mrs. Martha Strayer, 218 So. 19th St.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription.

Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

March Brings Out Unsightly Spots—How to Remove Easily.

The woman with tender skin dreads March because it is likely to cover her face with ugly freckles. No matter how thick her veil, the sun and winds have a strong tendency to make her freckles. Fortunately for her peace of mind, Othine—double strength—makes it possible for even those most susceptible to freckles to keep their skin clear and white. No matter how stubborn a case of freckles you have, the double strength Othine should remove them. Get an ounce from your druggist and banish the freckles. Money back if it fails.

TINLEY PARK

On Friday night a large company of Tinley Park people journeyed to Blue Island to celebrate the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Snider, a former resident of Tinley Park. All enjoyed a delightful time.

On Sunday night a large company of relatives, neighbors and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Henke to celebrate the former's birthday. The evening was pleasantly spent with games and other diversions. Refreshments were served, and all enjoyed a jolly good time.

Joe Reinee has opened a meat market in the Foster building, in which Elmer Kench recently conducted a market.

The local school board has been visiting the schools of neighboring towns and cities to get plans and ideas for the new school to be erected in Tinley Park this Spring. A number of meetings have been held relative to getting the necessary plans and specifications drawn up. The matter of choosing a new building site has also been given much attention. The Thies property, in the northwest part of town, has been suggested as the most feasible place for the new school. If the board decides that the school should be built there, then another special election will have to be called to vote on the matter.

Chester Rick visited with his brother in Argo Saturday and Sunday. The latter is employed as an electrician at the Argo plant.

Tinley Park is patiently waiting for the approach of Spring and warm weather, so that the concrete road can be completed.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Mohr died Monday. Funeral services were held Wednesday.

General Instructions To Bidders

Notice is hereby given that sealed bids for the furnishing, unloading, hauling, dumping and spreading of approximately 575 cu. yds. of 3-inch crushed stone, approximately 250 cu. yds. of 1½-inch crushed stone, and approximately 175 cu. yds. of screenings, on what is known as 175th street, will be received by the Highway Commissioner of Bremen Township, at the office of the Town Clerk, in the Village Hall at Tinley Park, Ill., until 2 o'clock p. m.,

SATURDAY, APRIL 7th, 1923.

Also sealed bids will be received at the time and place mentioned above for labor and teaming by the hour for grading, ditching and making embankments on 175th street, under the direction of the Highway Commissioner.

Only sealed bids will be considered.
The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

LOCATION

The location of the road upon which the improvement is to be made is as follows:

On what is known as 175th street, on section line between Sections 25 and 36, Bremen Township, extending from the east township line approximately ½ mile in a westerly direction.

Average haul from Homewood, Ill., is approximately 2 miles. Deliveries can also be made from other nearby gravel pits or stone quarries.

Engineer's estimate, $4,000.00. Bids exceeding $9,000, if accepted, will have to be paid by anticipation warrants on the hard road fund of Bremen Township.

This job is being re-let on account of the last bids being in excess of the amount in the township's hard road fund. The width of the road to be improved has been reduced from 12 feet to 10 feet.

JOHN M. BETTENHAUSEN, Highway Commissioner, Bremen Township.
